Re: Outdoor burning rules Section 7 page 3
Rules 7.10 Rural

The problem of falling branches from large trees on the waterfront has been discussed with neighbours who all agree that there should be a controlled burn-off on the mud at least twice per year.

The foreshore is a small boat area and at present branches have been thrown into the sea and someone else then has to collect them up and find a way of disposing of them. ie burning.

A fire with minimal smoke because the branches are dry, lasting about 2 hours, should be allowed approximately 3 times per year to solve the problem and keep the beach-front tidy.

Yours sincerely,

Shirley Currie (Mrs)
