Your submission	Water for Urban and Rural areas is under increasing strain. And I read the plans you have for major water users. However, I think the whole water system could be relieved if changes were made to requirements for New Home Consents.
What do you want Environment Canterbury to do?	Make it compulsory for all new home builds to include a water tank and water collection from 10,000k or more off the roof of their new home. The cost to do this is minimal given the overall cost of building a new home. It would only add about $3k to a new home cost. There are so many new homes being built and all these homes could be watering gardens, water stock, and cleaning cars with water they themselves have collected off their roof. THis would leave the more urgent water provisions of drinking water up to the council and thereby reduce the strain especially at times of drought.
