ECan facts

Much has been said about Cloud Ocean, Environment Canterbury's role in consenting water use, and protecting our water supply. ECan is very aware of those responsibilities, and takes them very seriously.

Whatever people's views, ECan must work within the law, and some facts may be helpful.

The Resource Management Act (RMA) allows consent unless an activity is specifically prohibited – water bottling is not. The key issue then is whether consent will create environmental impacts that are more than minor. Evidence shows, and an independent Commissioner, the city council, ECan and Cloud Ocean's consultants agree, that Cloud Ocean's water bottling will not affect the city water supply.

Cloud Ocean can use an existing bore. A new consent for a deeper bore does not mean it can take more, as consents are capped. Only the city council can apply to take more water. Currently, 75 per cent of the city's allocation is being used. Of Canterbury's water use, Cloud Ocean takes the equivalent of two teaspoons in a 10-litre bucket.

Anyone can apply for consent, and nationality, race, ethnicity, the end use or destination of the resource are not grounds for refusal. Nor is foreign ownership, though Cloud Ocean is a New Zealand-registered company. ECan recognises that a sustainable, healthy water supply is vital to our future, but must work within the law. The Government is considering changes to the RMA, and we encourage those with strong views on it to make their voices heard as part of that review.
