I agree with and endorse the concerns raised by Vicki Buck at the Christchurch City Council, especially those around the very loose limits that seem to be being applied

Unlike some in the community the risk of things like bowel cancer and other health issues does not concern me nearly as much as our Global reputation

If we become known as a food producer producing food from dirty contaminated water then the value of our produce will diminish

If our city becomes known as one for having contaminated water then that will adversely impact our tourism industry

I'm not necessarily particularly smart person so if I recognise these things and I'm sure there are many very high value smart tourists who we are trying to attract New Zealand who will look for other cleaner environments in countries where they are endeavouring to clean up

It is my view that we need to take a particularly hard line on these issues today in order to protect the value of all their investments now and into the future
