Reasons comment:

New Zealand is not a paddock for lease that needs to be pushed to maximum capacity. There is too much dairy industry in this country already. There is clear evidence that intensive dairy farming practices are destroying waterways and causing irreparable damage throughout the country. The answer to this growing problem is not to pipe it straight into the bloody sea. Enough is enough.

Consent comment:

Do not grant consent for the pipeline to be built. Tell them to work within the constraints of the consent they most definitely knew was in place before they purchased the factory.
