Reasons comment:

I believe the odour levels have been understated. It should be entirely clear that the discharges at times constitute an objectionable or objectionable effect. This is periodic for us at 98 Waterloo Road, but when it occurs and the wind brings it our way, it can be awful. It is certainly not a 'less than minor nuisance'. I have been advised in the past that this has occurred at least in part due to carcass processing systems breaking down and them not identifying this until odour complaints are received. Tegel should be able to keep operating, but I am concerned that the level of odour is being misrepresented in this application, and as such I don't have confidence that the additional corrective steps committed will be sufficient to address them to a consistently 'less than minor' level.
