Reasons comment:

The expansion of the coal mine will be a major step backwards in the journey towards a sustainable future. I can speak on behalf of myself, my friends and family (and I'll be as bold to say almost everyone I know) when I say that the Bathurst's actions are not something we want for our country. Our native flora and fauna should be held in high respect, especially above commercial gain. As a young adult the thought of the effects of climate change we have yet to see is daunting. I'm scared. I want to grow old still being able to enjoy the beauty nature has to offer, not watching it fall apart. If we continue to let nature be destroyed in such a way we'll regret it most heavily. Everytime even a small area is destroyed it adds up again and again to a greater loss. I have a niece, she's 7 months old and she deserves to be able to live in a world she can enjoy and explore without having to worry about the future of it, or have the burden on her generation's shoulders of fixing the problems that are made now by ignorant and unsustainable decisions. Everytime we can stop someone from harming our environment is a win. I hope that these consents will be denied. That'll be a big win to celebrate. :)
