Reasons comment:

I oppose the expansion of the Bathurst mine at Coalgate for environmental and ethical reasons. Bathurst has a history environmental damage, non-cooperation, and rule-breaking. Although Bathurst will argue that the mine contributes to the economy, they will not factor in the economic implications of the climatic and ecological damage the fossil fuel industry is responsible for. They intend to leave that cost to future generations, including our children, for whom life may be horrific as a result. The science is absolutely clear that carbon emissions have to drop radically to prevent global catastrophe. Instead, emissions keep rising. This can't be allowed to continue. Short term profit doesn't justify the consequences.

Consent comment:

Because we're in the midst of an ecological crisis, I'd like Environment Canterbury to unconditionally decline Bathurst's application.
