Reasons comment:

Coal is past it's use by date in our world and our economies, and no longer lends itself towards sustainable developments. Taking coal out of the ground ensures the carbon that is sequestered in it will be released in to the atmosphere, leading to warmer climates and worse outcomes for all New Zealanders and the entire planet. As such, it is short-sighted illogical to allow this proposal to go ahead and rip up even more pristine land here in New Zealand.
