Reasons comment:

Burning fossil fuels is not good for the environment. (I am sure you know about this and I don't need to reiterate!) If the argument is that this activity is good for the economy, we MUST remember that the 'economy' is not alive, it is a tool to be used wisely. Otherwise, we may not stay alive. We need to question the deeper motivation for anything we do, seeing the bigger picture of the consequences of what we do, and unfortunately I see greed as a prime motivation for much of what we do now, without any regard for consequences.

Consent comment:

Not to give consent for mining coal, but perhaps consent for some regenerative farming which would be healthier and more useful for all concerned.
