Reasons comment:

E poko! It seems to me that this application is the antithesis of where we need to go. While ostriches don't actually put their head in the sand it seems like humanity in New Zealand is. In this day and age with commitments to the Paris Accord and major environmental issues, particularly in Waitaha how can we even consider extending coal mining; it is nonsensical. Let's pull out heads out of the sand and actually use it for thinking how can this be a good idea to approve this application?
