Reasons comment:

I am concerned the health risks of living next to quarries are not well documented and repercussions of living next to a proposed quarry will not be known until it is too late and a number of people's health are affected. I am concerned that Rangiora's water will be compromised with them being allowed to put a quarry over a drinking water protection zone. Zones are in place to mitigate against contamination I find it hard to believe they would be allowed to extract 1m from ground water when Taggarts themselves state there will be potential effects on the quality of groundwater. We frequent the Rakahuri trail often and have grave concerns about the increase of traffic due to the trucks and safety of my young family on their bikes. The noise and air pollution is not acceptable to live beside. When experts such as scientists and doctors tell you living by quarries and breathing dust is bad for your health then that is who I will listen to! I didn't see in Taggarts report a mention of carcinogenic properties associated with silica dust or how they expect to treat long suffering health issues that arise from long term exposure to quarries. I have children and my biggest concern is their health and wellbeing so my concerns around water, air and noise pollution I believe to be valid concerns.
