Reasons comment:

We found out about the quarry earlier this year when we were looking to buy a property adjacent to the site. This was to be our “dream home” after 2 years of looking, we finally found it! However we decided not to go ahead with an offer because of the proposed quarry in the racecourse. We were concerned about excessive dust, which can be harmful to health and excessive noise. We have young children. It was a huge disappointment to not go ahead with the purchase. We knew the house value would drop as soon as the quarry became operational. It's crazy that a quarry could be considered adjacent to a residential area! We have since purchased a different property far away from the quarry site but still feel regret about the other house. I am concerned about the residents around the area being exposed to harmful dust and having their property values drop - thus making it hard for them to leave the situation. There is plenty of other land near the Ashley river where a quarry could be established, without affecting any residential areas.
