questions regarding the MAR aquifer - is one of the aims to extract more water - with long term depletion risks. or is the focus on improving water quality.

2nd issue- dune restoration and erosion river banks

With sea water level rise and increase flooding risk- the building of new houses in high risk areas/near waterways can be actively discouraged. Also - retreating from waterways can be encouraged. What I currently see is new houses being build in high flood areas like our estuary in South Brighton. I also see barriers- brick structures- at the high tide line of the estuary- being replaced- those barriers only have been put a few years ago- and already destroyed by high tides and flooding.

The natural course of our rivers have to be analyzed. As we do have a space to retreat - it is important to give space for our dunes and natural riverbanks so they can grow instead of erode so they can protect us from flooding and sea water level rise.

it will save taxpayers money to have a long term vision (more than 10 year)
