Stop granting resource consents to take more and more water; better vigilance of water consents and prosecute those that don't comply; better recognition of threats to community drinking schemes (actually do something, not just talk and write about it); better protection of freshwater biodiversity including ensuring streams, rivers and waterways actually have water.

Better management of water. Stop allocating water to more consents & follow up on old consents to ensure they comply with conditions and aren't putting rivers, streams or drinking wells at risk. This is particularly important for any wells in flood plain areas, especially if the wells go under water during floods.
